

Rooted Simply Word Study: Acceptance vs. Approval

Definitions & Core Meanings

Acceptance

Root idea: To receive, welcome, or acknowledge the inherent worth of a person.

Biblical resonance: Hospitality, compassion, recognition of shared humanity.

Greek parallels:

Proslambanō — “to receive, welcome, take to oneself” (Romans 14:1, 15:7).

This word emphasizes embracing a person, not endorsing their behavior.

Approval

Root idea: To endorse, agree with, or affirm that something is good, right, or worthy.

Biblical resonance: Moral discernment, testing, and evaluating.

Greek parallels:

Dokimazō — “to test, examine, approve after testing” (Romans 12:2; 1 Thessalonians 5:21).

This word emphasizes evaluating actions or beliefs, not people.

In short:

Acceptance is about the person.

Approval is about the behavior.

These two are not the same—and Scripture never treats them as interchangeable.

How Scripture Distinguishes the Two

Jesus Accepted People Without Approving Their Sin

He welcomed:

tax collectors, adulterers, the demon-possessed, the unclean, the outcasts

But He never once approved of sin. His pattern was:

Come to Me (acceptance)

Go and sin no more (non-approval)

Acceptance opened the door. Truth transformed the life.

Paul Teaches the Same Distinction

“Accept (proslambanō) one another, just as Christ accepted you” (Romans 15:7).

“Test (dokimazō) everything; hold fast to what is good” (1 Thessalonians 5:21).

Paul commands acceptance of people and discernment of actions—side by side.

Why Christians Confuse Acceptance and Approval

Because we live in a culture that says:

“If you don’t approve of my choices, you don’t love me.”

“Disagreement equals rejection.”

But biblically:

Love is unconditional. Approval is conditional. Acceptance is relational. Approval is moral.

God Himself models this:

He accepts us in Christ (Ephesians 1:6).

He does not approve of everything we do (Hebrews 12:5–11).

If God can separate the two, so can we.

What Acceptance Looks Like (Biblically)

Acceptance means:

- treating someone with dignity
- listening without hostility
- showing compassion
- offering hospitality
- recognizing their value as an image-bearer
- being patient with their journey
- loving them where they are

Acceptance is relational posture, not moral endorsement.

What Approval Looks Like (Biblically)

Approval means:

- affirming something as good
- agreeing with a belief or behavior
- supporting a choice
- celebrating an action
- endorsing a lifestyle

Approval is moral agreement, not relational love.

How Christians Can Love Without Approving

Follow Jesus' Pattern

He loved fully. He spoke truth clearly. He never confused the two.

Hold to Both Grace and Truth

John 1:14 says Jesus came “full of grace and truth.” Not half grace, half truth. Full of both.

Grace = acceptance. Truth = moral clarity.

Remember That Love Does Not Equal Agreement

1 Corinthians 13 never says:

Love affirms everything

Love celebrates all choices

Love avoids conflict

Instead, it says:

Love rejoices in the truth

Love bears, believes, hopes, endures

Love is strong enough to disagree.

Keep the Door of Relationship Open

Acceptance keeps the heart soft. Non-approval keeps the conscience clean.

Let the Holy Spirit Do the Convicting

Rooted Simply Word Study: Acceptance vs. Approval

We are called to:

love, pray, speak truth when invited, walk in integrity

We are not called to:

control, coerce, convict, change hearts

That's the Spirit's work.

A Simple Way to Say It

Acceptance says: "I see you. I value you. You matter."

Approval says: "I agree with your choices."

Christian love says: "I can accept you without approving of everything you do, because that's exactly how God loves me."

Why This Matters for Christian Living

When we confuse acceptance with approval:

we either compromise truth or we withdraw love

But when we distinguish them:

we can love boldly, we can stand firmly, we can reflect Christ accurately

This is the balance that makes Christian love both powerful and transformative.
